Final Learning Log

- Have a look at all the artefacts in the virtual whiteboard and your personal notes.
- What has most surprised you?
- What is still puzzling you?
- What do you take away from all of this, what will you do (differently) next Monday?

Final exercise: Sharing highlights

- Review your learning log, and pick a few highlights that you are willing to share with the group:
  - What has most surprised you?
  - What is still puzzling you?
  - What do you take away from all of this, what will you do (differently) next Monday?
- Post these on stickies to the virtual whiteboard.

Surprised at the Simplicity of what you end up with but you have to go through a process to get there

You can have many ways to create the Kanban board that will still have the principles of it

WIP limit should (always) be considered

Visualisation is key

So many use cases to use Kanban to improve our WoW

Why the Uber example is a Classes of Service

Add a ready column to become pull system in the Kanban board

From tomorrow: start visualising everything!

So much more than just a Kanban board!

Is skipping the line an example of classes of service? they are treated differently

How much difference WIP limit make

Help out my commercial colleagues to build a Kanban board as they are always too busy manage work instead of people surprised about the flexibility of the board

start where you are! align with ITIL4

Trust people to organise their own work

Flow efficency

Works with any Project Management Methodology

Limit WIP for good quality work

PULL work don't push
